Globalizing Your Staff

Most international students are eligible to work as interns. They offer employers language skills, unique global viewpoints and cross-cultural awareness of world markets.

Internships
Authorization is granted by the university’s International Students and Scholars Office (ISSO) through Curricular Practical Training (CPT). Students may participate in multiple CPT experiences during their college experience.

The employer provides an offer letter to the student specifying the detailed terms of employment and completes an Internship Memorandum of Understanding. The internship must relate to the student's academic program and be for academic credit. It is the student's responsibility to have CPT authorized by the university, a process that typically takes a minimum of two weeks. This comes at no cost to the employer.

Volunteer Experience
Volunteer experiences provide opportunities to gain knowledge of a career field and specific skills. Organizations cannot hire an international student as an unpaid intern or volunteer if they generally pay a U.S. citizen to do the same work.

Full-Time U.S. Employment
After graduation, international students are usually eligible to gain practical experience of up to 12 months of full-time employment in their field through Optional Practical Training (OPT). Students typically apply for an Employment Authorization Document the semester before graduation at no cost to potential employers.

After a student's OPT or CPT, a different type of work visa is required. The common temporary working visa, the H-1B, can be obtained for three years and extended for a combined total of six years.

Your organization can file for an H-1B petition for a student already working under OPT or CPT. The H-1B is only one option. For example, some employers may support the employee getting a green card/permanent residency.
